

CORN TOO HIGH FOR EXPORT.

Not a Single Bushel Placed for Lake Shipments Yesterday.

WORLD'S FAIR MEN NOT AFTER RELICS.

Some Musty Drawing Cards Which Have Been Refused—Work of Meat Inspection—Gossip of the Garden City.

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE BEE.

Not a bushel of corn was placed for lake shipment yesterday. Grain shippers said that corn is now too high for export, and the only sales were small lots to New England. Wheat, however, continued to go forward although not so rapidly as was arriving in Chicago and stocks are piling up in the elevators. The forward movement of rye is now heavier than it has been for a long time. The market would not stand the amount of tonnage thrown upon it, and rates declined to 2 1/2 cents in wheat and 2 1/2 cents on corn to Buffalo. To Georgian Bay the rate has been fixed at 1 1/2 cents on corn. The crop in Buffalo rates will not continue long, as vesselmen are anxious to get permanent collapse before grain begins to move in September.

NO TIME FOR RELICS.

A proposition has been made to exhibit at the world's fair, which General Grant lived before he moved to Galena. The cabin stood on the bank, ten miles from St. Louis, and was the scene of the general's death. It is now in the hands of the general's family. The proposition is to purchase the cabin and to have it transported to the fair grounds. It is estimated that the cost of the cabin would be $100,000. The proposition is being considered by the fair management.

A SPECIAL MEETING OF THE SASH, DOOR AND BLIND ASSOCIATION.

PROFICIENT STUDENT LIFE SAVERS.

Lieutenant H. B. Rogers, the inspector of the United States life saving stations in the Eleventh district, held his annual inspection of the Northwestern university life saving crew yesterday. The crew is the most interesting and capable of fighting a big lifeboat. The Evanson crew, which is composed of wideawake rowers in the Northwestern, has not won a life last year by which the boat can now be righted in an incredibly short time. It consists of a system of leverage with ropes attached to either side of the boat, a very simple contrivance. Such an arrangement, Captain Lawson claims, would have prevented the loss of the life boat in the trial last spring, which slipped off the beam of his capsize boat in a storm. The crew capsized and righted the boat yesterday three times in the trial. The crew is a large crowd. The best record was forty-two seconds. The inspector said that if he had been told that the crew had done this, he would not have believed it. He added they would not doubt his report on the record at Washington. He complimented the crew on their superior showing. The members of this crew are Captain L. O. Lawson and seven university students, Frank M. Kinding, E. J. Fowler, W. M. Ewing, J. A. Kinding, O. L. Wilson, W. R. Holt and W. W. Wilkinson.

CAN CONTROL THE ELEMENTS.

Melbourne, the Rain Maker, Will Exhibit His Art in Wyoming.

CONFIDENT THAT HE WILL SUCCEED.

Declares That He Will Try and Sell His Secret to the National Government After Demonstrating Its Value.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 27.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—Frank Melbourne, the rain maker, arrived here from Gaston, O., today and is ready at any time to show what he can do. Some time ago a circular letter was received from him by Governor Barber, and this letter was published in the local papers. The subject naturally excited a good deal of interest here and negotiations were at once entered into to secure the presence of the rainmaker here. He wanted $100 to defray the expenses of himself and his assistant, the money to be paid only when the experiments had been carried out to the satisfaction of a committee of the subscribers.

CONFIDENT THAT HE WILL SUCCEED.

The money was quickly raised and the result of it was Melbourne's arrival here this morning. Melbourne is a tall, slender, pale-faced man with a studious cast of countenance and a rather pronounced Irish brogue. He is an Irishman by birth, but has spent the past twelve years in Australia. He is evidently a man of very good education. Chemistry has long been his hobby while his pleasure has been found in making experiments. His discovery of his ability to produce rain, he says, was entirely accidental.

CONFIDENT THAT HE WILL SUCCEED.

During a severe drought in Australia, he claims to have made a dozen successful tests. Afterward, he made five successful experiments in New Zealand. He has been in this country only a few months and has made his headquarters at Canton, O. He made three successful experiments there. Regarding the secret, he says, accounts for the alleged failure. The local papers got to appointing days for rain on their own account, but he naturally looked for the down pour but it never came. This was not his fault as he had advertised no experiments on such days and the total failure, he says, accounts for the alleged failure.

CONFIDENT THAT HE WILL SUCCEED.

Melbourne looks forward to his success as a matter of course. He is willing to try the experiment at any time or under any circumstances that the committee may suggest. He leaves the time entirely in their hands. The weather here has been threatening rain for several days, consequently the experiments will be postponed until such time as the weather is perfectly clear. The experiments will be conducted under a committee composed of Andrew Gilchrist, president of the Stock Growers' bank, C. P. Organ and Governor Baxter, all of whom are heavy and well-to-do men. Melbourne is a modest, unassuming man and he has favorably impressed everybody he has met. The experiment will be tried in the city of Cheyenne, Wyo., and will be eagerly awaited by Cheyenne people.
